TRANSFORMING LIVES

Invoking the power of universe

-A talk by Rashmi Aiyappa, Spiritual Scientist & Founder
Aashwasan Life Enhancement Services Sdn. Bhd.

Venue: ParkRoyal, Jalan Sultan Ismail, Kuala Lumpur
Date: November 22 ,2009 from 5.30 PM to 7.30 PM

According to WebMD one of the popular online sites on Health and Survival techniques, the best way to survive quicksand is - "If you're ever stuck in quicksand, don't thrash around. Just go with it until things settle down", note researchers including Daniel Bonn, PhD, a physics professor at the University of Amsterdam in the Netherlands. But yet the article notes that many humans even despite knowing this fact do not practice it. Another popular 'How to Survive' site has this to say about Surviving Drowning - "You don't need to panic if you ever find yourself in the middle of a flood or fall out of a boat".

During times of crisis or times of great adversity, individuals find it very difficult to practice these nuggets of wisdom. In most situations, responses seem to be reactive and have a flavor of fighting the tide and working against situations. It is during these times, that the differentiation between self and others or the situation, becomes more marked. The experience one has, is of fighting against a person /persons or fighting against a situation. This creates a feeling of struggle, inner turmoil and stretching of all mental and physical resources.

All of us face such situations in our professional and personal lives almost on a daily basis. The quantum of problems or issues depends on the situations outside. It could be caused by professional issues such as economic recession, client pressures, technology pressures, marketing pressures, competitive pressures, internal organization pressures or could be a result of personal issues such as relationship challenges, conflicts with close friends/peers, inability to be free of debilitating emotions, obsessive thoughts and so on. Most of the times, the responses to various situations create an inner sense of emotional turmoil

And yet things need not be this way. Difficult times need not change the calm and peace inside. It is possible to feel calm and graceful even under the toughest situation. Individuals can learn to unleash and experience their innermost nature. When this happens, one gets a feeling of working along with nature, the distinction between self and others vanishes and actions seem effortless. It is almost as if one has enrolled the entire universe to work for oneself. All actions flow like water and there is grace in actions. Right steps, right actions, strength of conviction, courage are displayed at appropriate times automatically. It is not as if one is trying to be courageous, but courage flows as a result of being focused on the innermost self.
