

A true story from a mother

Hope for Congenital issues

A mother's narration of the transformation in the life of her daughter with multiple congenital issues.

I am Alamelu. This is the story of my daughter, Kanishka, whose life transformed and continues to unfold miracles every day of her life, giving me a deep assurance that she will find her space in this world.

Born with multiple congenital issues including a severe spinal anomaly, a single kidney, Laryngomalacia and Ectopic Anus, Kanishka was a complex case for doctors. The prognosis of the medical experts was that my daughter will not be able to walk unless multiple surgeries are done. All of which needed to be done before the age of 6. As a baby she was prone to frequent urinary and lung infections. She did not develop stability in the neck or trunk even at 2 years of age and was very frail. As she grew, we saw that there were huge delays in development which caused deep anxiety in me. She had motor delays and speech delays apart from the spinal and kidney anomaly which didn't allow her walk.

Caring for her special needs required a lot of time and efforts including many hospital visits and multiple therapies. Most of the time, we were alone in taking care of her with never-ending questions about my little one's condition. We could neither understand our daughter's anomalies and delays in development properly, nor did we know whom to turn to for support. It was at such a juncture that I sought Aashwasan's support. When Kanishka started her sessions with Aashwasan, she had come with trauma of early childhood experiences with medicines and needle phobia due to the numerous tests she had undergone. We were lost and didn't know who to trust. We were struggling and feeling hopeless as we had no clue of what needs to be done for her.

Much to our relief, all her developmental milestones started happening rapidly after the treatment process at Aashwasan began. Although she still requires a little bit of support, Kanishka entered her sixth year fairly independent in her walking. For me, it is a big thing not to constantly worry anymore about my little one having to go under the knife to start walking. Her speech is getting clearer with every passing day and there is nothing that she doesn't try during play time activities despite slight imbalances in her gait.

She has started to go to school and is extremely enthusiastic to learn. Her gestures, expressions and unique ways of interactions steal everyone's heart. At school, she is a bright and intelligent 6 year old who is excited about reading, writing, colouring and making new friends. Her teachers and caretakers at her school are constantly amazed at how much fun she has and how much she is willing to cooperate with the task at hand. She also is getting physically stronger and is now walking without support. Her gross and fine motors skills are improving every day. She does all her activities of daily living and self-care by herself now. Infections are nil now due to increased immunity. At 6, Kanishka is trying to be on par with her typically developing peers and is taking sure steps towards a bright future. The heartache that I had in her early years has transformed into joy. I am looking forward to her life now.

Thank you Aashwasan
