Spiritual therapy for special kids

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

Bangalore: Renu does much more than any other mother would have to do. Mother of an autistic child, Renu spends a lot of time taking her five-year-old son Ankit for various therapies — montessori, special education classes, occupational therapy and swimming. She seeks answers from all fields to understand Ankit, what he likes or dislikes, what he wants or what he feels.

Ashwasan, a spiritual science organization, will conduct a seminar on Ashwasan spiritual science hope for children with special needs' at Nalanda Centre, The Times of India, on September 5, from 9 am to 1 pm. One in every 10 children have developmental issues like autism, cerebral palsy, mental retardation, Down's Syndrome to name a few.

Ashwasan offers its support through its diagnostic, assessment, treatment and counselling tools based on spiritual science. It's founded by Rashmi Aiyappa, whose life experiences bring forward the world of spiritual science to transform lives. To register for the seminar, call 9731301016/17.
